

Beneficiary Companion™

Here to help when your loved ones need it most

Your loved ones will have a lot to do when it comes to settling your estate. Beneficiary Companion™ services from Standard Insurance Company can ensure they aren't doing it alone.

If your beneficiary is the legal executor of your estate, they'll have access to a Beneficiary Companion coordinator. These dedicated coordinators will make phone calls, complete paperwork, and take care of important personal and legal matters. This allows your loved ones to focus on caring for themselves. The service comes at no extra cost to you or them as part of your group life insurance plan.

Personal support and guidance

With your beneficiary's approval, the Beneficiary Companion coordinator can send notices to:

- Social Security Administration
- Credit reporting agencies
- Credit card companies
- Banks and other financial companies
- Third-party vendors
- Government agencies and utilities

Your loved ones can also receive:

- Guidance on how to obtain death certificate copies.
- 24/7 live support and advice.
- A copy of "The Beneficiary Companion Guidebook," a helpful tool for handling the loss of a loved one.

Services for modern-day concerns

Closing social media accounts

If you have a social media presence, the Beneficiary Companion coordinator can help close or memorialize your online profiles.

Identity protection

Protecting your identity will continue to be important. Beneficiary Companion can help guard against someone opening an account or obtaining a loan or tax refund in your name. The coordinator will:

- Review credit reports with your beneficiary.
- Assist with placing a credit freeze or closing accounts with credit bureaus.
- Help resolve issues if identity theft occurs. Their full-service support includes legal assistance, reporting fraud to credit bureaus and banks, help filing a police report, and following up with creditors.

When it comes to settling your estate, Beneficiary Companion ensures your loved ones have the help and guidance they need. Knowing this should give you — and them — confidence and peace of mind.
